

Media Release

The King's Hospital School celebrates 350th anniversary with art exhibition

April 5, 2019: The King's Hospital School has officially opened an art exhibition at the school as part of its series of 350 commemorative events.

Cutting the ribbon, haute couture fashion designer and past pupil Ib Jorgensen said: "There are some really great works here, and it's great to see such an emphasis on art at the school."

He spoke about his time as a fashion designer and later as an owner of an art gallery and told students that becoming an artist can be a struggle. "It can take some time to find your own niche...but it's worth it when you get there," he said.

The wide-ranging expo, which will run at the school until May 31st, features works from well-known contemporary artists including past pupils Fergus A Ryan and Adrienne Symes as well as from KH students and members of the KH community.

Log on to <http://www.kingshospital.ie/350> for further information on The King's Hospital School 350th anniversary and upcoming events.

Media enquiries:

Bernie Healy
Phone: 087 261 5514
Email: berniehealy6@gmail.com